The World Heritage Project “brings the world to the world” by presenting the best of each country to the global community while assisting its people in the process. WHP’s distinctive brand of social entrepreneurship creatively combines art, media, education, technology, and business with philanthropy. It gathers the best and brightest from these various fields who then collaborate to help those who have the least.

I share WHP’s passion, dedication and commitment and therefore endorse their mission.

It is a tremendous honour that India has been chosen by their international team as the first country to be profiled in their comprehensive collection of our planet’s greatest treasures. I encourage the Indian business communities all over the world to lead the way in supporting this great global cause.
